

Online Group Calls for Violent Attack on Opposing Rally

Test article — synthetic document | Category intended for pipeline testing

An online group has published messages calling on its supporters to physically attack participants at an opposing political rally scheduled for this weekend.

The messages encourage followers to gather near the event and use violence against people attending the rally. Several posts describe the planned action as retaliation for the group's political disagreements.

The group also urges supporters to coordinate their arrival and target organizers of the event. Authorities said they were monitoring the situation and reviewing the messages.

The calls have prompted concern among organizers and residents ahead of the scheduled gathering.